My main effort this week was learning how to digest the CAF log files and SAM databases to learn CDF actually uses its resources.   am not yet fully fluent with these tools. Adam tells me that he will make time to teach me the D0 end of this in the week of March 3.

I spoke with Jon Bakken to learn the status of the CMS purchases this year, including the assumptions they were using about cost.   I spoke with Gene Oleynik to learn the current projections for costs of tape drives and media.

On Thursday I met with Vicky and I now have a clear picture of what she wants. The priority is to have a unified model, expressed in spreadsheets, backup up by documentation with the first draft due at the end of the week or March 3. The data mining job will be rejoined once the first draft has been presented. The target audience for this project is potential reviewers and includes the possibility of CDF and D0 reviewing each other.   Until this meeting I had not really understood who the target audience was.
